

Three Of Striking Pressers At The Fuller Plant Arrested

Charged With Being Members Of The Gang Who Beat Up Employees

Two of Men Arrested in This City and Third Man Apprehended in Albany by Sergeant Phinney

HEARING ADJOURNED

All Three Men Enter Pleas of Not Guilty and Furnish Bail in Sum of $500.

Three men, all former employees of the Fuller shirt factory on Pine Grove avenue, faced Judge Culliton in police court this morning on charges of inciting a riot, and through their attorney, Andrew J. Cook, entered pleas of not guilty and had their hearings set down for Thursday morning, September 13, in police court. A fourth man arrested on a similar charge was discharged. The three men arrested are William Ertelt, 29, of 57 Newkirk avenue, George Sickler, 28, of 173 Lincoln street, and John Kruszenski, 21, of 82 Chambers street. They are charged with being members of the gang that drove up to the curb at Foxhall avenue and Shufeldt street early Friday morning, and assaulting Elmer and Philip Carney, brothers, of 79 Lincoln street, and Ray Lammon of 31 Shufeldt street, who were on the way to work at the Fuller plant. The police are still searching for the other three men who are said to be members of the gang that assaulted the Fuller employees. The three men arrested were employed in the pressing department at the Fuller plant and went out on strike with the other pressers on August 24.

Arrested on Friday

Sickler was arrested late Friday afternoon at his home, while Ertelt was arrested at the union headquarters in the Byrne building on Broadway, at Henry street. Kruszenski was arrested in Albany by Sergeant Charles Phinney and Officer Lenville Relyea who had gone to that city on a tip that Kruszenski had left Kingston for that city.

Sickler Held on Two Charges

Sickler was also arrested on a second charge, that of assault in the third degree, lodged against him by Elmer Carney, who has a black eye as a result of the assault on Friday morning. A hearing on this charge was also fixed for September 13.

Employees Tell of Assault

The Carney brothers and Lammon were in police headquarters on Friday at which time they furnished information on which the warrants were issued against the three men. According to the three Fuller employees they were on their way to work in the factory when an auto filled with six men pulled up at the curb and the men piled out. Right after that the fracas started.

Is Felony Charge

The charge of riot lodged by the police against Kruszenski, Ertelt and Sickler is a felony charge.

Judge Culliton fixed bail in the sum of $500 each in each case and bail was furnished.

When the three men were arraigned in police court this morning the district attorney's office was represented by Assistant District Attorney N. LeVan Haver, while the three men were represented by Attorney Cook, who had also been retained as attorney by Frieda Schwenkmeyer and Josephine Kaczor, two labor organizers, arrested recently on charges of disorderly conduct on the picket line, and whose hearings are set down for Wednesday, September 12, in police court. Both are out on $25 cash bail.

Union Represented in Court

When the hearing of the three men was called in police court this morning Miss Schwenkmeyer, assistant organizer of the strike now in progress, and Joseph Raskowski, chairman of the strikers' committee, were present in court, as well as several others who have been doing duty on the picket line since the strike started.

No Picket Line Today

Owing to the fact that the factory only works five days a week, it was closed today, and there was no picket line. However, a car load of pickets were parked on Pine Grove avenue, opposite the factory, but they did not get out of the car.

According to the police some of the pickets remain watching the plant day and night since the strike started.

There have been no new developments in the acid throwing incidents, although the police know that the acid was purchased in a drug store in Poughkeepsie, and have descriptions of the men who made the purchase. The police are still working in both cases.

Fight Set for September 13

New York, Sept. 8 (AP)—Forced into his third straight postponement of his return waterweight championship match between Barney Ross and Jimmy McLarnin today was set ahead to September 15, one week from tonight.

DAUGHTERS OF AMERICA WILL HOLD CONVENTION NEXT YEAR IN THIS CITY

Through the efforts of the delegation from Vanderlyn Council, No. 41, Daughters of America, the women's auxiliary of the Jr. O. U. A. M., the 1935 state convention will be held in Kingston in September. The local delegates who worked hard to have Kingston selected for the 1935 convention are Mrs. Jennie Hubbard, Mrs. Elizabeth Shader, Mrs. Ella M. Snow, Mrs. Rose Jones, Mrs. Goldie Gerhardt and Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Steinert.

The convention will be in session for three days, and will bring approximately 500 delegates to Kingston. This year's convention was held in New York city, where the convention headquarters was the Hotel New Yorker.

Mayor C. J. Heiselman has written a letter to the state officers of the organization thanking them for selecting Kingston for next year's convention and offering the fullest cooperation of the city authorities in making the next convention an outstanding success. The convention committee of Kingston has also written the state officers to the same effect.

Mediators Spur Peace Efforts as New Strike Imposes Threats

Washington, Sept. 8 (AP)—President Roosevelt's board of mediation strove today to find some basis for peace in the textile strike as events shaped themselves toward a new impasse in the controversy. While a week-end lull descended on the strike, there were indications of renewed activity on both sides on Monday. Some manufacturers are ready to reopen their plants. Strike leaders plan new picketing campaigns.

Organized labor swung solidly behind the striking textile workers as President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, called all international unions into a conference next week to shape plans to support the strike. He denied there would be a general walkout.

In South Carolina, scene of much violence in the present conflict, the way was cleared for the declaration of a state of insurrection when Governor Ibra C. Blackwood issued a proclamation against unlawful meetings, a preliminary move required by statute if martial law is to be declared. The governor gave no indication whether he would take further action.

The President's board of inquiry had both sides of the strike before it as it exploded further means of reaching a settlement. The board heard Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the strike committee, for several hours yesterday, and later conferred with George A. Sloan, president of the cotton textile institute, representing the employers.

After the meeting with Sloan, Governor John G. Winant, of New Hampshire, chairman of the board, said no proposal for bringing the opposing sides together had been made, adding that the discussions thus far had been entirely exploratory. Sloan said he described to the board conditions in the industry before and after the textile code went into effect, while Gorman gave the workers' side of the controversy and outlined the demands of the strikers.

Governor Winant said the board would hear a number of technical men within the industry over the week-end and would confer with Sloan and Gorman again on Monday.

A hopeful note was Gorman's statement he was "very favorably impressed" by the board. He reiterated, however, that the union's cooperation with the board did not mean the end of the strike.

Because of the normal Saturday closing of many mills, little picketing activity was expected today.

The Benedictine Benefit Concert

Over a thousand people sat spell-bound, breathless, excited, last evening as they listened to a concert of perfect beauty given as a labor of love for the benefit of the Benedictine Hospital, at the Kingston High School auditorium, by true artists. So great a gift of "truth, beauty, goodness" created an atmosphere that entold the audience as with a benediction. How could it have been otherwise when Pierre Heurrot, so modest, so retiring, so greatly an artist and lover of his fellow men was the moving spirit? Everyone present must have carried away a memory of haunting beauty that was preeminently friendly, never austere.

The program itself was an inspiration. What could have been more in season as the opening number than the "Five Impressions of a Holiday" by Gossens for piano, flute and cello, played by Inez Carroll whose ensemble piano playing is ideal; by Georges Barrere, whose flute music is ethereal and by Horace

300 PERISH AS STEAMER BURNS AT SEA; 250 REPORTED RESCUED

Sharp Prows And Grim Seamen Grapple the Sea To Answer Broken SOS

All Liners Within Immediate Distance Swing Over High Rolling Seas Against Northeast Storm in Heroic Dash.

New York, Sept. 8 (AP)—Three passenger liners and a freighter answered the fire-broken SOS of the steamship Morro Castle off the northern New Jersey coast early today.

The Monarch of Bermuda, which raced at a 20-knot clip to the scene, was bringing tourists home from Bermuda. A 22,424-ton "Monarch" of the Bermuda trade, it is a Furness-Bermuda liner built in 1931.

The rescue dash climaxed a trip from Manila, P. I., for the President Cleveland, Dollar liner. Formerly the Golden State, it was built in 1921 at Newport News, where the ill-fated Morro Castle was constructed. The President Cleveland is a 14,123-ton passenger and freight vessel.

The Andrea F. Luckenbach, freighter in the Luckenbach fleet, left Los Angeles August 21. It is a big ship for a freighter, with a gross tonnage of 10,725.

The City of Savannah, a coastwise steamer, is the smallest of the four. It is a 5,654-ton passenger ship owned by the Ocean Steamship Company at Savannah.

Despite a driving rain and high wind, three New York city police boats put out from Pier A, at Battery Park, for the spot off the Jersey coast where the burning ship was reported.

About an hour later the three boats, returned after battling high seas off Sandy Hook. Sergeant John Knell, in charge of the boats, said they were unable to make headway off the Hook and were forced to return.

At police headquarters it was reported that a number of New York policemen were aboard the burning ship.

28 SURVIVORS AND 31 BODIES BROUGHT IN

Manassas, N. J., Sept. 8 (AP)—Coast Guard boats brought 28 survivors and 31 bodies here today from the wreckage of the burned liner Morro Castle.

The Coast Guardsmen said they had picked up the survivors and the bodies from the water in the vicinity of the liner. Most of the survivors had on life preservers.

One of the survivors was a boy who doctors said would probably die. The survivors, most of them in serious condition, were taken to hospitals.

There were indications more survivors and bodies would be brought here as additional Coast Guard boats were reported on their way here.

COHEN'S SWIM TO SHORE AFTER SIX HOURS IN WATER

Sea Girl, N. J., Sept. 8 (AP)—After nearly six hours in the water, Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Cohen of Hartford, Conn., survivors of the burning steamship Morro Castle, swam safely to shore today.

The couple had one life preserver between them. They were the first to land of the group of people seen swimming or clinging to pieces of wreckage near shore.

Coast guards put out two lifeboats in an effort to reach the rest of the swimmers.

The Cohens collapsed and were taken to a nearby hospital.

RECKLESS DRIVING CASE AT STONE RIDGE DISMISSED

Stone Ridge, Sept. 8.—In dismissing the cases of Albrecht vs. Leahy and Leahy vs. Albrecht, in which Fred Albrecht of Flushing, L. I., and James Leahy of Brooklyn accused each other of reckless driving following their collision at the corner of Cooper street and the main road a week ago Tuesday, Justice of the Peace Louis D. Sahler, before whom the cases were tried Thursday, gave his decision that the evidence was not sufficient to warrant a verdict of guilty in either case. Witnesses for Albrecht were his passengers, Hardmeyer, Claude Wilkewitz and Ray Van Demark. Appearing for Leahy were Patrick Fogarty, his passenger, and Irving Noris.

Ship's Member Tells Stark Tale of Horror On Stricken Liner

By WILLIAM O'SULLIVAN
Deck Stoker-keeper of the Morro Castle

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Spring Lake, N. J., Sept. 8.—I was asleep when the fire broke out on the Morro Castle this morning, but the fire gong awakened me and I went to my station on the starboard side of the ship.

One of the men told me lightning struck the ship and set an oil tank on fire.

By the time I reached the deck the whole midships was burning as far as the boat deck. It seemed that only the after part of the ship was clear.

We tried to fight the fire with hose from the boat deck but it was no use. The flames had such a hold and were burning so fiercely that it was impossible to stop them.

Someone shouted to me "there's a woman in that room."

I broke into the stateroom and tried to find her, but I couldn't see anybody there and the smoke drove me out.

In all the time we were fighting the fire I don't remember seeing any passengers. Some people jumped overboard, but I don't know if they were passengers or members of the crew.

Most of the passengers and crew were asleep when the lightning struck and I don't see how very many of them were able to escape.

We were given orders to launch boats from the starboard side of the boat and eleven of us got into one boat and got away. Six boats were launched from the starboard side.

I don't believe any were able to get away from the port side because the wind was blowing the flames over that side.

We stood by for awhile looking for people in the water but didn't see any. There was a heavy ground swell running and we had trouble standing by.

The ship was like a furnace by this time and was burning from one end to the other. I tried to see if anybody was on deck but I couldn't see anybody.

I remember seeing the chief officer on the bridge while we were fighting the fire. The captain died last night from a heart attack and the chief officer was in charge of the ship when the fire broke out.

We stood by for about 15 minutes and then made for shore. We didn't see anybody in the water as we pulled away.

NATIONAL GUARD PLANE
FLIES OVER WARD SHIP

Spring Lake, N. J., Sept. 8 (AP)—A National Guard plane piloted by Capt. John H. Carr of the 44th Division circled the burning Ward liner Morro Castle at 10 a. m. today, and dropped a note saying two more lifeboats were headed shoreward.

Carr was accompanied by Commander Thomas B. Mulroy, a member of the governor's staff. The men landed shortly after dropping the note and said they had seen several bodies floating in the water. They planned to make a second trip to drop flares near the lifeboats to assist in the rescue.

The burning ship had a slow drift shoreward, Sgt. Joseph Leichtenstein quoted Carr as saying.

2,252,000 Bales of Cotton

Washington, Sept. 8 (AP)—Production of 2,252,000 bales of cotton this year was reported today by the department of agriculture as being indicated by September 1 conditions, compared with 2,195,000 bales indicated a month ago, and 13,647,000 bales produced last year.

All along the coast storm warnings were being issued south of Virginia Cape hurricane warnings were ordered. The weather bureau at Washington placed the hurricane last night and reported it was moving between north and northeast about 15 miles an hour.

Virginia coastal points prepared for the storm which was due to strike there in mid-morning.

At the spot where the Morro Castle was burning a driving rain beat down and heavy surf was running, making it virtually impossible for small boats to go to the aid of the stricken craft.

Cincinnati, Sept. 8 (AP)—William E. Hutton, 88, founder of the Cincinnati and New York investment house bearing his name, died today of pneumonia. He retired from the business several years ago.

Morro Castle Was A Graceful, Modern Monarch of the Sea

New York, Sept. 8 (AP). The Morro Castle, carrying a cargo of fire into New York today, is a long, low liner with rakish lines and two funnels bending back before the wind.

When she set out on her maiden voyage from New York to Havana, Cuba, August 23, 1930, festooned with flags, she already had won the title of one of the fastest turbo-electric liners afloat, by maintaining an average of 21 knots in trials.

She failed to set a record for the run on her first voyage, making the trip in 59 hours, while the Cunarder Mauretania had made it in less than 50 hours. She made the trip back in 58 hours—a new mark for ships in regular services on the run.

She is 508 feet long and has 11,520 tonnage. She has accommodations for about 500 passengers. She left the yard of her builders, the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, for New York August 16, 1930.

Just three years ago this month, she faced a trial comparable to today's—weathering a hurricane for 48 hours off Cape Hatteras, bringing her 140 passengers and crew of 200 through safely.

Cutter Tampa Reports
Passengers, Officers
Still Aboard Vessel

Washington, Sept. 8 (AP)—A wireless message received at the Coast Guard headquarters here at 9:45 a. m. today from the Coast Guard cutter Tampa, reported she was standing by the flaming Morro Castle preparing to attempt to rescue "a number of passengers grouped on the forecabin deck."

The message said that the Morro Castle was afire from the bridge aft, the passengers having sought the only temporary haven of safety.

Also standing by was the Monarch of Bermuda, as well as the Coast Guard patrol boats Faunce and Cahoon and the Sandy Hook pilot boat.

The Tampa reported the Morro Castle was "apparently gutted."

The commanding officer of the Coast Guard district at Asbury Park, N. J., reported that five lifeboats had reached the beach there, with approximately 85 persons.

The Tampa wireless Coast Guard headquarters at 10 a. m. that she was preparing to take the Morro Castle in tow.

Some of the passengers on the forecabin deck had been removed to the Tampa, it reported, but members of the crew were remaining aboard.

This was taken to indicate that the fire was being put under control, inasmuch as the Sandy Hook pilot boat was scheduled to help steer the Morro Castle into port.

The Morro Castle's steering gear was out of commission, and the pilot boat planned to assist by steaming close alongside. The Tampa also has wireless for tug from New York, where the stricken ship will be taken.

Stand By Ship

New York, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Atlantic Gulf and West Indies Navigation Company, owners of the Morro Castle, said it had received word that the acting captain, two officers and part of the crew remained aboard the burning Morro Castle.

U. S. Weather Bureau
Tells of Hurricane
Sweeping Toward Ship

New York, Sept. 8 (AP)—A heavy storm swept the Atlantic coast today as the burning liner Morro Castle lay helpless off the New Jersey shore.

All along the coast storm warnings were being issued south of Virginia Cape hurricane warnings were ordered. The weather bureau at Washington placed the hurricane last night and reported it was moving between north and northeast about 15 miles an hour.

Virginia coastal points prepared for the storm which was due to strike there in mid-morning.

Wage Heroic Fight

A heroic fight through the waves was waged successfully by Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Cohen of Hartford, Conn., who swam ashore and reached the beach exhausted. They had one life preserver between them. They were taken to a hospital.

Crew members, before their talk was stopped, stated that fire hoses were brought forth only to find there was no water pressure.

Flames Broke Out In Library Of Steamship Morro Castle Trapping Victims Below Deck

(Copyright by The Associated Press.)

Spring Lake, N. J., Sept. 8.—Fire, terror of the sea, swept the passenger liner Morro Castle in the storm shrouded darkness just at dawn today barely eight miles off-shore from Asbury Park, N. J.

Five and one-half hours later more than 300 of the 558 passengers and crew were unaccounted for.

"SOS—Morro Castle afire off Scotland Light—"

The first frantic "SOS" was picked up at 3:23 eastern standard time. So swiftly did the roaring flames envelop the vessel, with its 318 sleeping passengers enroute home to New York after a 7-day excursion to Havana, that the ship soon was aflame from stem to stern.

Shortly after 10 a. m., eastern standard time, fewer than 250 survivors had been landed or picked up by nearby steamers racing to the rescue.

Bodies were visible in the water off the beach at Sandy Hook, N. J. Surf boats from the coast guard stations along the Jersey shore pushed through the heavy seas in search of survivors.

The blaze started apparently in the library, according to some of the members of the crew reaching shore in a lifeboat. It spread to the great tanks of fuel oil and enveloped the 11,620-ton liner in a pillar of flame visible along the Jersey coast.

Dr. Charles Cochrane of Brooklyn, who came ashore in a boatload of survivors, gave a graphic description of the scene which greeted his eyes as he turned out of his cabin in the pitch blackness of night.

"The front part of the ship was all aflame," he said.

"I do not believe any passengers who got caught in the hold or cabin at any point in the ship beyond the library had a chance of escaping."

Shipping along the Atlantic coast was stunned by import of the Morro Castle's broken "SOS", and though the liner was in the heart of the greatest shipping region in the world, there was not a ship nearby.

As coast guards and police battled in heart breaking failure to beat their way in launches through the surf and raging white-capped seas, those members of the crew escaping from below managed to lower lifeboats from one side of the flaming vessel.

In mute and pitiful evidence of the failure of many of those aboard to reach safety, lifeboat after lifeboat landed with barely a crew to fill it. The Morro Castle's boats had a capacity of 70.

Left Havana Wednesday

The Morro Castle left Havana Wednesday night. Last night her commander, Captain Robert Wilmot, died from a heart attack, leaving the vessel in command of Chief Officer W. F. Warms when she caught fire.

First to reach the blazing ship was the Monarch of Bermuda, crack Furness liner. She took off 65 persons.

Next was Andrea F. Luckenbach, who picked up 22 persons and wireless ashore to have ambulances waiting.

Reaching the scene then were the President Cleveland and City of Savannah.

Life boats were launched and those landing along the Jersey coast reported they had drifted beside the blazing ship for an hour without seeing any bodies or survivors.

Then, out of the fog and rain lashing the shore in the dull grey dawn, came the pitiful thin stream of survivors in life boats—and two whom swam safely ashore.

Eighty-five survivors were landed in New Jersey. Others were reported here and there but whether they were duplications was a matter of conjecture. An airplane, circling the charred hulk of the Morro Castle, reported two more boats heading inshore.

The plane, manned by a national guard observer, also reported sight of bodies in the sea. But little time could be given early in the day to bringing in the dead. All thought was for the survivors, a terror-stricken and exhausted lot.

Those who came ashore related tales of horror. Members of the crew, still fully checked by officers, told of futile attempts by members of the deck watch to fight the flames which turned the vessel into an inferno.

The bride was given away by her father, Mr. Schoonmaker, of West Chestnut street, and the groom was Mr. Schoonmaker, of West Chestnut street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Hendrickson, of St. Albans, N. Y., at the St. George's Brook, N. Y., on Saturday, September 4, 1931.

On Wednesday of last week Henry Herbert Shultz and Miss Jane Gregory of Winnisnook Club motored to Hurley where they were the luncheon guests of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Warren. Upon returning to the club that afternoon they were accompanied by Mrs. Appleton Gregory, who had been visiting her mother, Mrs. Gifford Hasbrouck of this city. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Hendrickson, of St. Albans, N. Y., at the St. George's Brook, N. Y., on Saturday, September 4, 1931. The bride was given away by her father, Mr. Shultz, of Hurley, and the groom was Mr. Gregory,

KINGSTON, N. Y., SEPT. 8, 1934.

MACHINES AND HANDS

A neat problem is posed by a newspaper man traveling in Java. The Javanese used to weave the material
 for their own garments and dye them
 by hand in lovely colors. The batik work which was so popular in America was learned from Java. Today that skilled hand work is rapidly
 vanishing. The sarongs, or skirts, worn by the Javanese are bought from Germany and Japan where they are turned out in great quantities by machinery in factories.

The traveler talked with the proprietor of an art goods shop. She showed him three specimens of batik sarongs. One was made in Japan,
 one in Germany and one in Holland.
 The visitor could not distinguish between the machine made products
 and the Javanese hand work on sale in the same shop. Neither could most people, so they were buying the sleazy, imitation articles and passing by the fine, hand-dyed batiks which cost much more.

Well, why shouldn't they? If the Javanese work can't compete in the market with the machine goods, why shouldn't the Javanese import machinery and make all their stuff that way themselves? Then when the sarong-making is all modernized and mechanized, hand-made batiks can be restored as a leisure-time activity.
 That is the present version of progress, isn't it?

MORE THAN RELIEF

Money doesn't grow on bushes.
 Neither do clothes, food, houses,
 radios, baby carriages and the rest.
 They have to be created through human agency, the application of labor, time and thought to raw materials. Even the government can't go on supplying these things to the millions in want unless the nation
 begins making them again in abundant.

Relief is essential, at any cost.
 But while we take care of that, to the best of our ability and through all available channels—community
 funds and local, state and national appropriations—we must never lose sight of the fact that the fundamental problem is to get the nation producing once more. And we must so wisely distribute what we produce that the artificial surplus will not rise again to plague us. That will mean living wages, for all workers,
 in line with our American standard of living.

INDIANS AND GEYSERS.

Among the tourists this summer
 at Yellowstone Park were Chief Max Bigman, Crow Indian, and his wife and children. There are eight children, four little braves and their four sisters. This Indian family arrived in a good automobile. They camped not far from Old Faithful, setting up an Indian tepee, attached to poles
 carried on top of the modern car.
 They quickly became a big attraction
 to other visitors.

The most interesting thing about their choice of the Yellowstone for a holiday was the reason for it. Chief Bigman wants his children to know that the ancient Indian fears and superstitions about the geysers,
 boiling pools and steam vents of the region are foolish. This family's ancestors kept away from that scenic wonderland because they thought it peopled with spirits that would resent and punish intrusion. Chief Bigman's children, if they ask the guides—or their own father—to explain, may learn many things about natural phenomena and physical geography. Best of all, they learn the fear-breaking power of knowledge.

CRUELTY.

In Long Beach, Calif., the Society
 for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was called upon recently to end a
 so-called battle between a Black Widow spider and a poisonous scorpion. The two had met in combat in a private garage. They must have been fairly evenly matched, for the grim contest went on for four days.

That Body of Yours

 CUTTING DOWN ON FOOD

It is going too far to maintain
 as some do, that all cases of obesity
 overweight can be cured by diet
 alone. The word "diet" implies that the patient is left to normal
 eating, whereas starvation of a patient with some forms of endocrine
 gland, overweight leaves him weak
 but still possessing much water
 fat.

The point of interest is that to try to reduce weight by diet alone
 in a case where the thyroid gland in the neck or the pituitary gland in the base of the skull are not doing their work properly and so allowing fat to accumulate is wrong. The patient loses some weight but becomes so weak that there is great risk to health and to life itself.

These glands, however, though low
 in number, definitely control the gland
 extract if the patient is to be reduced satisfactorily and safely.

This doesn't mean that these
 "gland" cases should not have the starchy foods and liquids somewhat reduced, but it does mean that reduction in foods and liquids only will not bring results.

What about the use of gland extracts in the ordinary cases of overweight where the excess fat is due to overeating and underexercising?
 Cases have been reported in Boston,
 Philadelphia and other cities, where
 the use of the thyroid gland extract
 in these cases has brought about
 chronic ill health—rapid heart,
 sleeplessness, nervousness and indigestion.

Where diet alone should be used,
 that is in the usual cases of overweight, just a little less food than is needed should be given. This means that some of the fat on and in the body will get used to supply
 this need, and so weight will be gradually lost.

In a general way meat, eggs and fish should be eaten in the usual
 amounts; butter, cream, fat meats,
 potatoes, bread, sugar, salt and all liquids should be reduced by one-
 half; and plenty of green vegetables
 and—should be eaten to supply minerals and vitamins and to give enough
 "bulk" to the diet that constipation
 is avoided.

Meat gives a "satisfied" feeling
 and prevents overeating; bulky foods—cabbage, celery, lettuce,
 spinach—make the stomach feel that it has "enough" food, and so less heavy food with high food value is eaten.

No Talking at "Dinner"
 The Shakers of Ohio, now extinct,
 leaving only the name Shaker Heights
 to remember them by, in their own way took their meals as seriously as the calico-conscious persons of our own day. No loud talking was permitted while they ate, and only such conversation was allowed as became necessary for the serving of food.

Our Children
 By Angelo Patri

RADIO

THE radio is now a part of daily living. No household can escape its influence even if it would. The children listen to their favorite programs and talk them over with their friends. Like it or not their new force is educating the children, forming their tastes and moulding their opinions. It behooves us to pay some attention to the quality of the work it is doing.

Many parents complain about the quality of the program to which their children listen. They say something like this: "The Such and Such program is awful. It frightens the children so that they are afraid to go to bed. There ought to be a law against such programs being on the air."

Parents of the older group complain in similar fashion: "I can't see why such a man is permitted to express the opinions he does
 over the air when thousands of young people are listening to him.
 The man ought to be in jail for talking the way he does. Why isn't he taken off the air?"

Music is the most popular form of entertainment on the air. All kinds of music are offered, the poorest and the best. It is possible to hear the greatest artists in the world, or the worst performers conveying the poorest quality of music ever created during the same hour. Parents say: "I do wish they'd stop putting such stuff over.
 The children seem to prefer it to anything and it is going to ruin their taste for better things. Why can't something be done about it? Such programs ought to be forbidden."

Many of these complaints are justified. Many programs are cheap and mean to the utmost degree. But for the life of me I cannot see why there should be any question about suppressing them when any radio owner who has the power of his right hand can close them out and tune the good ones in. Why make laws and establish bureaus to do what you can so easily and with proper dignity do for yourself?

I believe in the force of public opinion but I believe first of all in the force of the individual. The head of the household ought to have control of such matters as radio programs. If a reasonable suggestion, a good example, a traditional taste will not work then a definite motion of the right hand applied to the button will work.

When parents say, "O, but he goes next door and listens there,"
 I am sorry for them. Since when have parents become so helpless?
 Since when has a child's mistaken notion of entertainment or recreation become the law of the household? The mushy weakness that permits a child to have his own way because he likes it carries its own punishment with it. Such a parent is going to reap the harvest of his own sowing.

Listen to the programs that your children tune in. If they are healthy in tone, even if they are not classic performances, let them alone. If they are vulgar, cheap as to ethical values, tawdry in form and color, tell the children so. Educate their taste. Help them find the better programs. There are fine ones on the air.
 Don't shoulder your individual responsibility off on the community
 or upon that mythical power, the Law.

When Worlds Collide
 By EDWIN BALMER & PHILIP WYLLIE

Synopsis of Proceeding Installment

At two places, Bronson Alpha and Bronson Beta, were away from another ship, the Bronson Beta, which was the last of the series. The Bronson Alpha, which was the first of the series, was the last of the series.

"Do you know that the last of the series is the last of the series?"
 "Yes," Jack Taylor asked Tony.

"I thought that would get a lot of you. Don't worry. Don't worry. You're in the first ship, with me, all right. Henderson is in command. You're a lieutenant. James is with you. But guess who's in command of the second ship."

"Jesse?"

"Guess again."

"Kane?"

"Nope, you're all wet. These two noble scientists are second in command. The big ship is going out under the instruction of your good friend David Ransdell."

"That's grand. Tony said, 'but will be have sufficient technical knowledge to run the thing?'"

"Oh, Jesse and Kane will do
 that all right. Ransdell's only going to be a figure head until they get to Bronson Beta."

"That's swell."

Tony kicked the lock on his suitcase shut, and said, "We've got to get packed up. You know we're going places tomorrow."

Jack sat down on the bed. "That reminds me; I'm going on the second ship, too."

Tony's face fell. They were serious again.

Jack said: "When you are all set, they want you down at the Ark. Everybody's going through it, and getting assigned to their quarters."

Tony walked up a long flight of steps to the airlock. As he went,
 he cast an upward glance at the elaborate structure of beams which supported the Ark, and which workmen were now removing.

The interior of the Ark was brilliantly lighted by electricity. Through its center ran a spiral staircase, and a long tube cable inside the stairs.
 At eight-foot intervals steel floors cut the cylinder into sections. The two forward sections were crammed with machinery and instruments
 and across them ran the great thrust-beams against which the atomic tubes would exert their force.
 A ring of smaller tubes pointing outward around the upper and lower sections like spokes were provided to give free dimensional control of the ship, and to make the adjustments necessary for ground-
 ing. It had been planned to travel head-on for the greater part of the distance. When the reaction forces were started the whole ship
 would be upside down for some time, and eventually the landing
 would be made after turning it end
 for end; and although the probability of depositing the ship precisely
 upon her stern, and of keeping her
 in that position, were small, it was felt that after she had landed she might tip over—a motion that would be broken by the use of the horizontal jets—or that she might even roll, which could also be stopped by the jets, as had been done
 on the short and simple hop from the ground on the right of the attack.

Tony walked up the spiral staircase from the stern's engine-room.

 Above it were storerooms with their arrangements for lashing fast
 the livestock. Above the storerooms were storerooms reaching
 to the center of the ship, and tightly packed. In the center of the ship were the human quarters, their walls carefully padded, and lashings, similar to but more comfortable than those provided for the animals, arranged along the floor.

These accommodations were not alluring. They suggested that the journey would be cramped and unpleasant, but inasmuch as it would take only ninety hours if it was successful everything had been sacrificed to utility. On the steel walls were water taps, and in steel closets food for a considerably longer time than four days had been stored; but in their journey
 through space the travelers would enjoy no comfortable beds, eat no
 hot meals and divert themselves with no entertainments. The exact conditions of flight through space
 were unknown; and underneath the passengers' quarters was apparatus both for refrigeration and for heating. Tony passed through the double layer of passenger quarters
 through the layers of storerooms
 and the engine-room at the front
 end of the great cylinder, climbing all the way on the spiral stairs.
 There he found Henderson, who was testing some of the apparatus.

"You sent for me?" Tony asked.

"No. Oh, I see what it was.
 They were giving out the numbers of your slings down below. I've asked every one to get in slings
 before we start and when we land,
 as I'm not sure from the single test, exactly what the general effect will be."

As Tony was about to go, Henderson recalled him. "I never showed you my engines, did I?"

"No," Tony said.

Henderson waved his arm around the chamber. It looked very much like the interior of a submarine.
 "This is the forward power-cabin,"
 he began. "The breeches of the main tubes are concealed behind a wall which is reinforced by the thrust-beams. Those are the ones which are to break the force of our fall; but you can see here the breeches of the smaller surrounding tubes. They are not unlike cannon, and they work on the same principle. Acting at right angles to our line of flight, they can turn
 the ship and revolve it end for end, in fact, like a thrown firecracker, if we should turn on jets

on opposite sides and opposite ends. The breech of each of these little tubes, 'at that point Henderson turned a wheel with a handle
 on it, and the rear of one of the tubes slowly opened." It provided with the tubes which generate the rays that split atoms of beryllium
 into their positrons and neutrons.
 The forces engendered in the process,
 which is like a molecular explosion,
 but vastly greater, together with the disrupted matter, is then discharged through the gun, the barrel of which is lined with Ransdell's metal. The consumption of fuel, so to speak, both in quantity
 and rate, is regulated by a mechanism on the breech itself. The rate and volume of the discharge will be, of course, immensely greater for leaving the earth, than it was on the mere hop from the ground on the night of the assault. The ship proved itself then to be a gun, or rather a number of guns,
 which will fire steadily on the trip through space. By Newton's law, which Einstein has modified only in microscopic effects, for every action there is an equal and positive reaction, so that through space the speed and energy of the discharge from the tubes—which
 we also call the engines and motors,
 rather inaccurately—are what will determine the speed and motion of the ship."

Tony looked at the breech of the tube and nodded.

"Journeying through space we will be a rocket that can be fired
 from both ends and from all around the sides of both ends."

"Exactly, although the side firing is of lesser intensity. We have twenty stern vents and twenty forward, you see, and twelve around
 the circumference at each end," Henderson smiled. "It is very beautiful, our ship; and according to the laws of physics, by the release of more power, it will navigate space
 as surely as it hopped from the ground, when we required it to.
 We'll leave this world, Tony; and I believe, we'll land upon Bronson
 Beta."

Tony stared at him. "And we'll live afterward?"

"Why not?" Henderson returned again. "We can count upon vegetation on Bronson Beta almost surely. No, surely, I should say.
 Higher forms of life must have been annihilated by the cold; but
 the spores of vegetation could survive."

"We know too little about the lower temperatures; but what we have discovered indicates that the germinating power of microorganisms and spores should be preserved
 at lower temperatures for much longer periods than at our ordinary temperatures."

"Archibuteus figured that the ger-minating power of spores would not deteriorate in three millions of years at minus 720 more than it would in one day at an ordinary early temperature. It is not unreasonable therefore, to believe that at the much lower temperatures which must have prevailed on Bronson Beta, spores and microorganisms could have been preserved,
 indefinitely."

"These, now, have been thawed,
 and are being revived by the sun,
 so I feel we can count at least upon vegetation upon Bronson Beta."

"At least," Tony caught up his words. "You will not deny, then,
 that there may be a possibility of higher life surviving or capable of being revived—too?"

Henderson shook his head. "I have seen too many incredible things
 occur, Tony," he replied, "to deny any possibility—particularly under conditions of which no one on this world has had any experience. But I do not expect it. I do expect vegetation, especially vegetation
 that grows from spores."

"In the early days of this world,
 the great majority of plants did not reproduce by seeds, but by the far more resistant spores, which have survived as the method of reproduction of many varieties. So we will count upon a native flora
 which, undoubtedly, will appear very strange to us. Of course, as you know, we are taking across
 with us our own seeds and our own spores."

"I know," said Tony, "and even our own insects too."

"An amazing list—isn't it, Tony?"
 "Our necessities for existence. We take so much for granted, don't we?
 We do not realize what has been supplied you by nature on this world of ours—until you come to count up what you must take along with you, if you hope to survive."

"Yes," said Tony, "ants and angeworms—and mayflies."

"Exactly. You've been talking with Kepler, I see. I put that problem entirely up to Kepler."

"Our first and most necessary
 unit for self-preservation proved to be the common honey bee, to secure pollination of flowering plants, trees and so on. Kepler says that of some twenty thousand nectar insects, this one species pollinates
 more than all the rest put together.
 The honey bee would take care of practically all of this work, as his range is tremendous. There are a few plants—Kepler tells me—such as red clover, which he cannot
 work on; but his cousin the bumble
 bee, with his longer proboscis could attend to them. So, first and foremost among living things, we bring bees."

N-E-W-S

Hospitality.

Washington, Sept. 7.—When the Socialist-Democrat Upton Sinclair
 met Republican Chairman Fletcher
 inadvertently here the other day,
 he smiled at Fletcher and said, in an off-hand way: "Well, I guess we may be at each other's throats at any time now."

The diplomatic Fletcher eyed Sinclair's throat and said undiplomatic-ally:

"Any time."

There was many a New Dealer
 who would like to have said that,
 but couldn't. In fact, the New Dealers welcomed their unwelcome guest with such cordiality that it must have seemed just a little strange to him. If he had come to Washington before he won the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in California, he would not have been able to get in to see an office boy in the New Deal.

As it was, he saw nearly everyone,
 without waiting, was everywhere
 given the glad hand and, to all surface appearances, was a big hit.

Oil.

The reason for that was well known to Sinclair and to the New Dealers, but to no one else.

When he invited himself to Hyde Park and remained two hours with the President, he emerged with a list of names of the people he should see in Washington. Before Mr.
 Sinclair arrived here, the Grapvine
 brought confidential advice to all government officials to receive him
 with open arms as a friend and not as a pest.

That was not hard for many of the New Dealers, as Mr. Sinclair is a very amiable fellow, a fast talker
 and quite clever on or off his feet.
 It was easy for such hosts as Harry Hopkins, who is just as clever as Sinclair and just as agile. For instance, Mr. Hopkins' attitude was:
 "Well, Upton, you can have anything
 you want." But Mr. Hopkins neglected to add that Mr. Sinclair
 could not have two hundred million dollars for his California program
 (if elected), although both Messrs.
 Hopkins and Sinclair realize the cor-
 eration could not give him that,
 the transaction appears to be fairly

much money if it wanted to, which it doesn't. They will take that up if Mr. Sinclair is elected.

Amiability may have been more of an effort for Jesse Jones of the RFC, for another instance. Mr.
 Jones never before, in his life saw a Socialist, even a reformed one.

In fact, a majority of those upon whom Sinclair called appeared to take him as brave man takes castor oil. They knew what was best for themselves, and could not whimper, but that was no sign that they liked it.

Self-Help.

The truth is that one phase of the Hopkins relief program is based on almost exactly the same fundamental theory as Mr. Sinclair's epic plan. However, Mr. Hopkins is a Realist and not a Socialist. He has taken the realistic rather than the idealistic approach. Thus he has managed very quietly to put relief workers into self-reliance work in every state of the Union, except Delaware.

In California itself, the FERA has advanced $299,000 (a long way from two hundred million, indefinitely) to 160 cooperative groups, 116 of which are in Los Angeles county. These groups operate a lumber mill, cannery factory, clothing factory, fishing industry, sewing establishment, dairy, garage, printing shop and what not. Goods thus produced are exchanged among the workers for other products.

In all states, such cooperatives
 have received $1,299,000. In addition, money has been loaned to states which carry on such cooperative self-work relief under their own auspices with federal funds. Ohio has developed this phase remarkably.

Mr. Hopkins would like to expand this basic idea to care for all the unemployed this winter. He is doing
 all he can to encourage such activity.
 But he knows very well the scheme
 has very definite political and economic limitations.

When the unemployed get to the point where they produce goods in competition with private industry,
 they throw out of work men who are already privately employed.

Mortgages.

Predicaments seem to come just
 as naturally to senators as big buzzards. There is a Democrat in one now.
 The mortgage on his home has been shunted around in such a way that the HOLC now holds it. He is shunning the situation may become public, but there is no reason why

MORE RECRUITS FOR THE STRIKERS IN PENNSYLVANIA: Workers of a worsted mill at Bridgeport, Pa., near Norristown, leave their jobs to join the ranks of the strikers after the door of the plant had been battered down by a band of operatives who had followed the call of the union leaders.

THE PICKET LINE AT TRION: Strikers, armed with wooden clubs, lined up in front of the mills after the shooting had stopped and the rioting subsided. Deputy Sheriff W. M. Hix was shot to death by a 13 year old boy in the doorway of the mill office.

THE SCENE OF THE BATTLE AT TRION, GEORGIA: The mill which ordinarily employs 1,800 people where a strike sympathizer and a Deputy Sheriff were killed and fifty others wounded, when rifle fire through the windows started the battle. Mayor N. B. Murphy appealed for troops to restore order but his request was refused by Governor Tabb.

VIOLENCE IN THE STRIKE IN PENNSYLVANIA: Men and women strikers tearing down the door of a worsted mill plant at Bridgeport to induce non-striking workmen to join them in the strike. Union leaders have refused to consider arbitration.

THE KINGFISH OF LOUISIANA ACCOMPANIED BY THE ARMY: Senator Huey P. Long, with an escort of National Guardsmen, parades through the lobby of the Canal Bank Building in New Orleans on his way to attend the second session of the State's investigation of alleged crime in the city.

Clearwater Bronze Tablet Arrives Today

The memorial bronze tablet to be erected in the First Dutch Church to the memory of the late Judge A. Y. Clearwater and his parents, was delivered at the church this morning. The tablet, provision for the erection of which was made in the will of Judge Clearwater, should have arrived here a week ago, the delay having been caused by its being shipped to Kingston, Pa.

The tablet, which is of bronze, four feet square, was made by the General Bronze Corp. of Long Island City and is being placed in position today by Frederick Reaner, erection superintendent of the company, assisted by Harry Sleight, secretary of the church.

It occupies the remaining vacant space on the eastern side wall of the church. At the top of the tablet there is a figure of a sphinx resting on a law book and the motto "Fide et Fortitudine." Below is the following inscription:

Brooklyn Doctor Tells 300 Perish As Of Port-hole Escape Steamer Burns

Spring Lake, N. J., Sept. 5 (AP).—Dr. Charles Cochran of Brooklyn, who came ashore among the 40 survivors at police headquarters here, gave this account of the two expert steamship, Morro Castle.

"I was asleep in my cabin when it seemed to me about 1 1/2 a. m. I awoke to smell a pungent odor of smoke. I heard a banging on the door and rose quickly.

"The passageway outside my cabin was a mass of flames through which there was plainly no escape for me. I slammed the door and rushed to the porthole which fortunately was at deck level.

"Through the porthole I leaped to the deck and ran to a nearby lifeboat. There was much rushing about on the deck but no apparent panic. I tumbled into the lifeboat which was already tightly packed with people.

"It seemed to me that I waited through eternity though it may not have been more than fifteen minutes before members of the crew got the lifeboat off the davits and let it into the boiling sea.

"The front part of the ship was a pillar of flame. I do not believe any passenger who got caught in the hold or cabin at any point in the ship beyond the library had a chance of escaping.

"Through sheets of rain, through churning seas that threatened at any moment to upset the lifeboat, we somehow, miraculously, I think, made safety to the shore.

"I saw only two other lifeboats heading for the shore in our direction. Once ashore we were taken to Spring Lake police headquarters where the Red Cross gave us sandwiches and coffee and supplied us with warm clothing.

"Nearly everyone here seems to be a member of the crew. I doubt that many passengers came ashore at this point."

Crew Members Claim Fire Began In Library

Spring Lake, N. J., Sept. 5 (AP).—Six members of the crew of the steamship Morro Castle said today that the fire in which more than 200 persons were believed to have lost their lives, started in the library in the fore part of the ship and that it was not struck by lightning.

All these crew members, whose names could not be learned, said that the fire spread so swiftly to midships that they believed few of the passengers below deck were able to make their way out.

One seaman was ordered by an officer to stop talking, just after he had related how the deck watch had tried to subdue the fire in the library and finally turned out the crew.

This seaman said that when the crew broke out the fire hose they found there was no pressure and the flames rapidly swept the length of the ship.

Another seaman said that when "we were called out and ran upstairs we found the whole midships blazing. We couldn't get through the halls to call the passengers as it was all blazing inside. So we ran along the deck, smashing windows on the outside.

"The lifeboats on our side of the vessel were put off all right but you couldn't get them off on the other side. There were 12 boats on our side."

He did not say whether the inability to get the boats off on one side was due to a list or flames.

Marine Observer Saw Bodies Afloat in Sea

New York, Sept. 5 (AP).—The Marine observer at Sandy Hook, N. J., reported about 10:30 a. m. today that the Sandy Hook Coast Guard Station said several persons were visible in the water off the beach, some apparently alive.

Every effort was being made to get lifeboats to them, the report said. The power lifeboat at the station has been launched and started to the rescue.

Rodie Transferred From Morro Castle

Donald Rodie, well known in Kingston, who was chief purser on the Morro Castle, was not on the ship when the catastrophe happened, having been transferred to the Oriente two weeks ago, relatives here said today.

Mrs. Joseph Hasbrouck was a visitor in New Paltz Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. DuBois Grimm and Mrs. Wyant Courtier, Jr., have resumed their positions as teachers in the Centralized high school at Highland.

Mrs. Mabel Yeager also teaches at Highland, in the Vineyard avenue school, where she has taught for many years.

Jay Heaton of Christendale was a caller in town last week.

HUMAN ABOVE PROPERTY RIGHTS
Washington, Sept. 5 (AP).—The American Liberty League evidently is determined against constraining the New Deal attitude as a challenge to open warfare. Rather, President Roosevelt countered criticism with the statement that the league would place human above property rights, if a choice had to be made.

300 Perish As Steamer Burns

over the shore, mist and fog settled down to blot out from anxious watchers the arrival of rescue liners and freighters.

Occasionally a ship appeared in the haze permitting watchers on one or two occasions to see the distant grey forms of ocean-going vessels standing by.

Deadly Sabotage.
Dudley Thomas, Havana agent of the Ward Line, derided vague rumors that sabotage might have been responsible for the fire in connection with the recent labor troubles which have paralyzed Cuban dock movements and stowage.

He said one possible cause of the blaze was lightning. A similar version was given by a seaman.

"It is hardly possible that the fire could have resulted from ignited cargo because it was not inflammable," Thomas said.

However, Major Hilario Gonzalez, chief of the Havana port police, began an investigation into the loading of the ship to determine whether there were any signs of sabotage and if all cargo loadings rules had been complied with.

Graphic Description.
A graphic description of the burning ship and the sea in her vicinity, was given by Governor A. Harry Moore of New Jersey upon his return from an airplane flight to sea.

The governor reported he could see at least 100 persons in the water, some apparently alive and swimming, and others floating quietly and apparently dead.

New Jersey National Guard planes were sent at once to Sea Girt and three at once took off to circle the locality of the Morro Castle in an effort to report the position of survivors and guide rescuers to them through the fog and haze.

Rescue Work Speeds Up
As the morning wore on rescue work speeded up. Additional boats were sighted in the sea mist. The Monarch of Bermuda, reaching quarantine, notified Federal authorities that of her list of 65 rescued a dozen were "stretcher cases."

Mrs. Renne Mendez Capote of Havana, landed from a life boat to tell how she had given up hope of escape from the flames which had trapped her in a cabin.

"I opened the door only to be met by a wall of flame," she said. "I slammed the door shut and thought it was the end.

"Then one of the crew smashed the glass from the cabin porthole and helped me out on deck. He lowered me to the next deck where the lifeboats were being manned and I got in. Few, if any, of those on the lower decks could have lived."

Mrs. Mary Robinson of Richmond Hill, N. Y., (1536 134th street), fought a heroic battle with the waves and storm for five hours, landing safely but in a state of complete exhaustion. She swam with the aid of a life preserver.

She was carried to a first aid station on the beach, calling incoher-

Paris Says Day Time Clothes Must Be Either Sporty or Tailored—Skirts 10 Inches From Floor

1427-B

1427-B Rich Materials Used in Combination in Afternoon Frocks.

Very much in line with the approaching fashion for greater formality in daytime clothes is the increase in the use of two fabrics—the one that makes the dress usually is plain and rich, and the one trimming it is glamorously lovely. To find either, or both, will not be a task, this season. For the stores are buzzing with excitement over the gorgeousness of the textile situation at the present moment. The vest in this particular model is cut along the becoming lines of the surplice. The back repeats the treatment in a similar, but more restrained way. The skirt is made with a pointed yoke—back and front. It is the type of skirt that is universally slenderizing, and one that can be run up quickly without any to-do about fitting problems. Canton crepe with metallic contrast is one attractive way of interpreting this pattern.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1427-B is designed in sizes 34 and 48. Size 36 requires 3½ yards of 39 inch material. One-half yard of 36 inch contrast.

1428-B Jacket Dress for a Woman as Well as a College Girl

A very popular style of neckline for immediate wear is one which is understood, but for a softening touch, made of the material, pleated, and finished at the center front there to show its importance of claim over the entire costume. Particularly chic is the treatment accorded this dress. It is made with a yoke, and the yoke has a tab. By a manipulation, skirt and surplice the jacket becomes the center of interest.

Any of the Fall silks, which have weight, will make this dress attractive. For this type of design bright colors are advised, by which we mean those strong, fashionable shades that later will be advantageously useful beneath a winter coat. Every even tone on the chart is popular, rich blues, or rusts, too; some lively blues, and a wide range of browns from the nutty shades to mahogany hues. If you have a penchant for black, the dress could be of that, and the jacket of a bright tomato red. This is a combination which will be seen a great deal this winter.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1428-B is designed in sizes 12 to 42. Size 34 requires 3½ yards of 39 inch material.

1430-B a DRESS for Collegiate or Business Women

If your eyes are for a dark wool frock, trimmed with a broad white band, we have found the answer for you in the casual little model which makes a fetish of simplicity, achieving its individuality through the medium of exciting striped contrast at the neck, and elsewhere.

This is a good dress for filling in the gaps in your wardrobe, now and later. It follows the dictum of "the fewer the seams, the better." The ones it has justify their existence by being just right in every way. The armholes are cut to give a rather sloping look (new). The neckline is high and close, with excitement appearing only in the immediate front. Hipline interest is again in the wind. The treatment, featured here, is especially interesting since the dramatic shaped pieces perform the function of pockets, and act as the starting point for the pleats in front.

Make the dress in any of the smart Fall wools, or Cantons. The trimming pieces may be of anything your fancy prompts you to believe will be flattering. The style of this dress is excellent and the yardage requirements extremely moderate.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1430-B is designed in sizes 12 to 20. Size 14 requires 2½ yards of 34 inch material; ¾ yard of 39 inch contrast.

1430-B a DAYTIME DRESS FOR IMMEDIATE WEAR

Reports from Paris tell us that there is only one universal tendency in the fashions for day clothes. They must be either tailored or sporty. Their silhouette follows the casual figure. Waistlines are normal, hips are flat, and skirts are made very straight, with just enough fullness included somewhere in the seams to allow for comfortable expansion. In those cases where this material is reserved is not provided, slashes (two or more) occur at the bottom. The new length is ten inches from the floor, which is slightly shorter than our skirts of last year.

This daytime dress is particularly recommended for immediate wear. It is an excellent example of the trend toward simple, dignified styles, the general effect of which suggests adroit cutting, and a sophisticated sense of design. It has an interesting neck treatment. The line itself is left undecorated—the attention centering on the plated jacket, which is carried out in an original arrangement of shapely lines. Insets in the side seams of the skirt give an accent to the idea of the pleated motif in the design.

Canton crepe is the material suggested for this dress. It wears satisfactorily over a long period of time, and this season, is one of the most fashion-right fabrics.

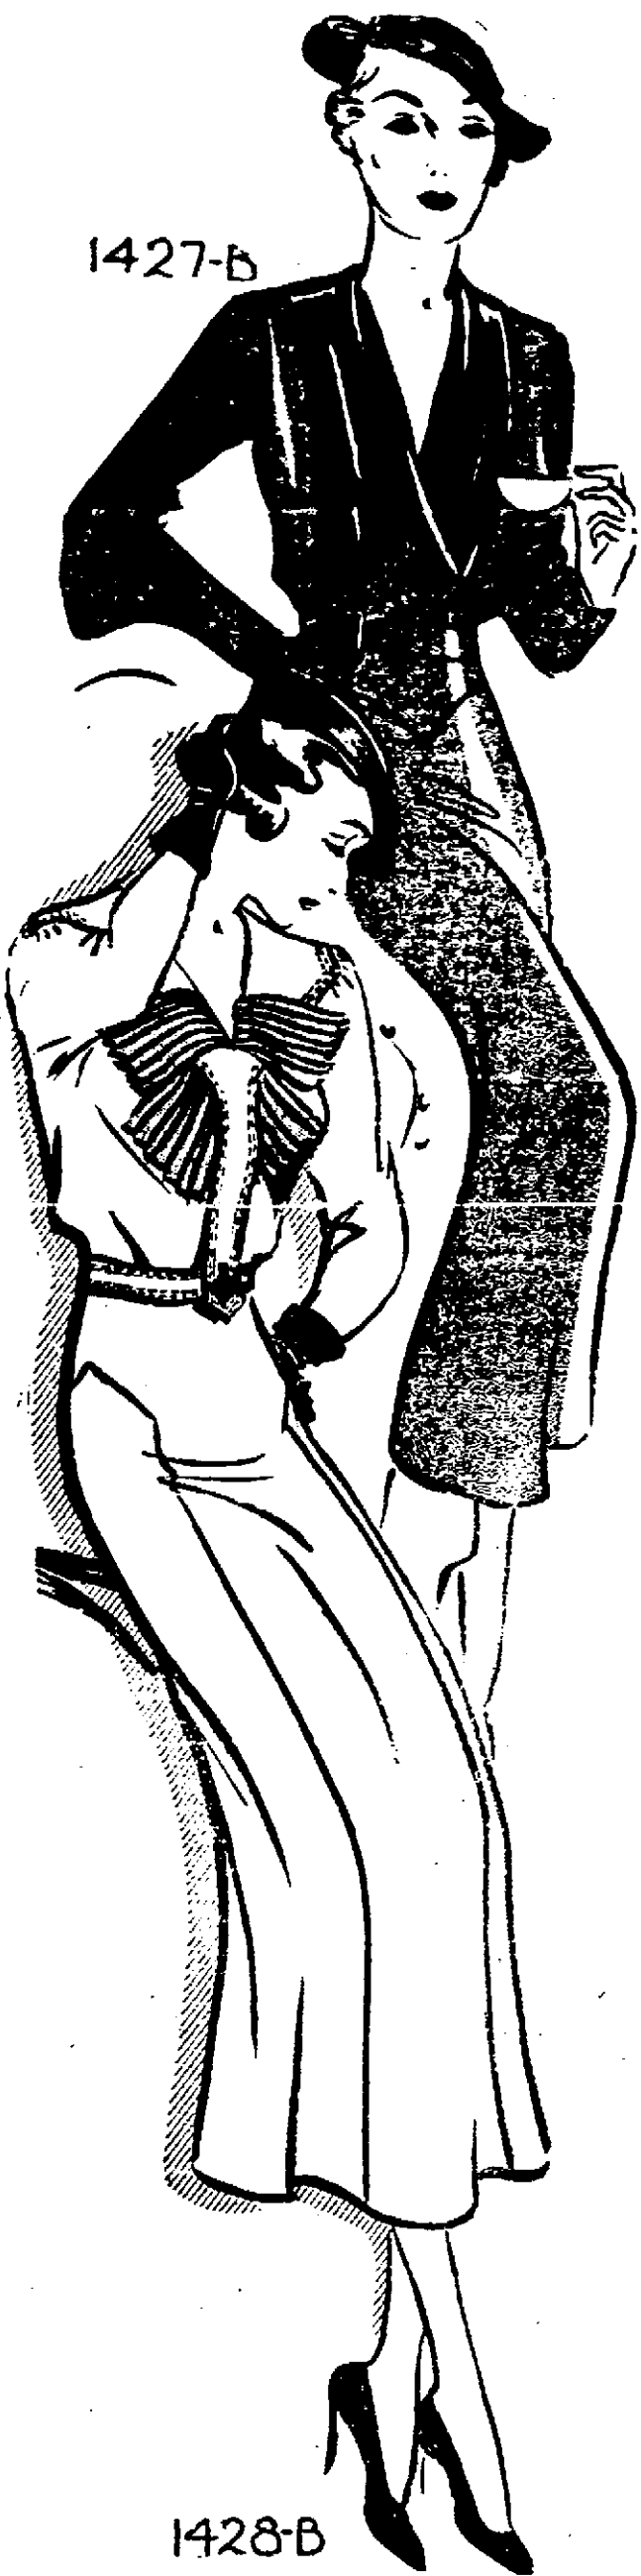

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1430-B

1431-B Tunic Are Staging a Revival This Year

Here is a beautifully wearable dress for women whose figures incline toward the matronly type. It follows the wrap-around theme in the bodice, as well as the skirt. The left side is practically plain with the cowl draping softly over it from the right and forming an interesting diagonal line which gives the figure an appearance of slenderness. A similar treatment is used in the skirt. For women who are none too sure of their talents as dressmakers we recommend this frock as one that can be put together easily. Made of Canton crepe it can become rather an important afternoon dress to be enjoyed on in-between occasions, so many of which arise intermittently during the fall and winter social season.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1431-B is designed in sizes 34 to 44. Size 36 requires 4½ yards of 39 inch material.

Small Furs Have Great Chic; This Year's Skins Beautiful

Muffs, stoles and scarfs are very beautiful, this season, and reach gigantic proportions. In fact, it's a big year for small furs. Furriers note that last year's cold weather has had its influence on the richness and heaviness of this year's skins, which may be one reason why there are so many sumptuous pieces on display.

Muffs are adopting a long, pencil-like silhouette, perhaps because of the prevalence of three-quarter sleeves and slim-sleeved suits. They are slightly shaped at the ends to take care of the arm as it widens, and are at their best when they have taken on your own personality—which means when they no longer have the appearance of a silky board, but have been crushed and wrinkled into shape through use.

Most of the furry pets which women will seem to have adopted may be eyed with doubt. It's the new muff that looks exactly like a curled up animal which will probably be to blame. Not that you need to take chances with a nipped finger! But watch for this smart feature—the use of head, paws and tail make these muffs look curiously life like.

A circlet of silver fox is the perfect complement to the fox-trimmed coat. If your coat is caracul, the muff should also match. One muff with a border of sable matched the sable collar of a caracul seen recently.

Gigantic stoles of silver fox, scarfs that assume almost cape proportions with ends that curl about the upper arm are important in view of the chic of the furless coat. A new note is the promotion of blonde fox, immensely flattering and smart, after a lapse of several seasons.

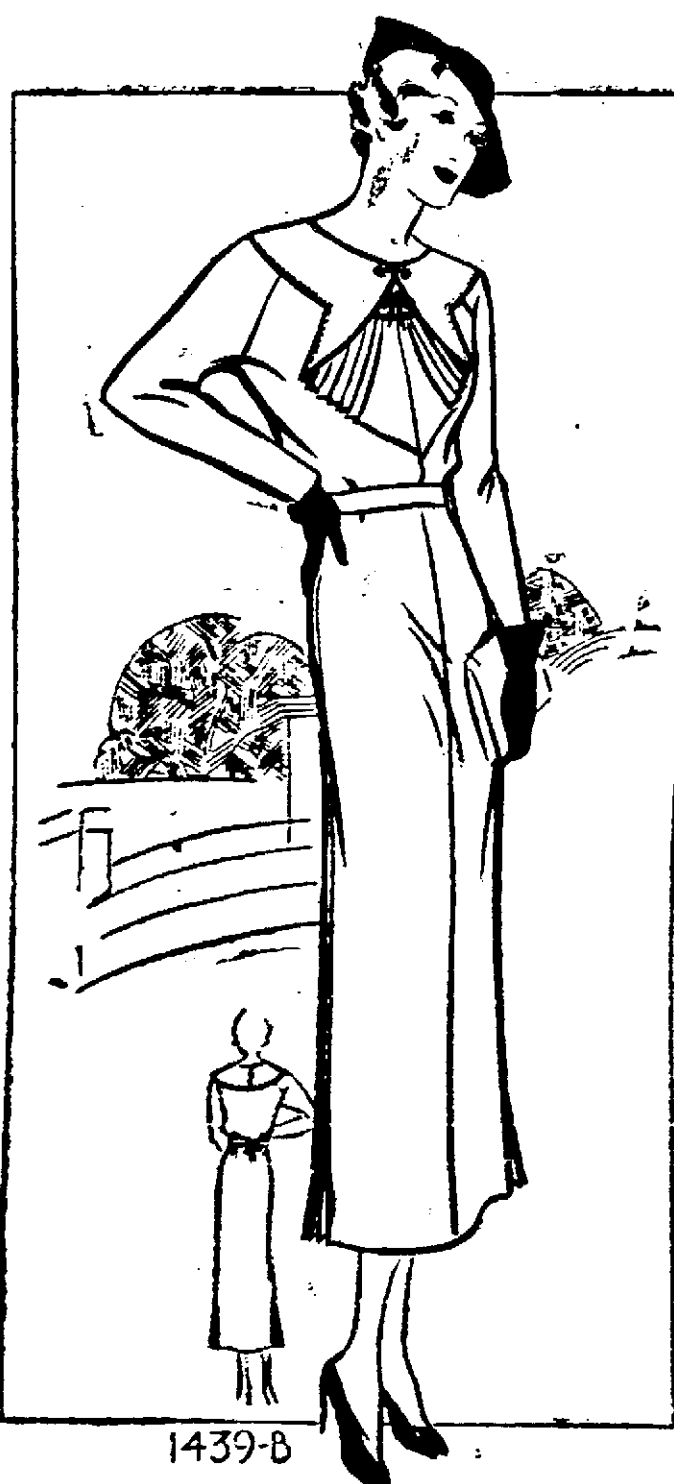

Fur Millinery and Gloves

Milliners and glove manufacturers are preparing for another cold winter—or perhaps they are merely taking advantage of the Russian influence. In any event, the cosack hats, turbans and even the pancake berets sponsored for zero weather are taking largely to furs, and the swaggar gloves which have already been loudly acclaimed are featuring fur in the wide flaring cuffs which give them their name.

Flat furs that look like crushed velvet, alternated with crushed velvets that look like flat furs, prepare to keep us as warm as any member of a polar expedition next winter—very dashing and very comfortable. Persian lamb and gairak are favorites, both looking their smartest when the fur of the hat serves as an accent to the fur or trimming of the rest of the ensemble.

The simplicity of suit sleeves makes the fur-cuffed glove an excellent investment in warmth and chic. The hands are usually leather, although you will see a few driving gauntlets with leather palms only, the rest of the gloves in a very fine velvety fur.

with tiny turn-back cuffs, some are very wide, as in the mandarin coat which is noticeably prominent. Still others introduce width at the elbow, and some formal dressmaker coats have shirred sections or tucks at the wrist to effect a close-fitting cuff. Raglan shoulders are in keeping with the comfortable, casual look of these charming coats.

Wear a belt if you like, but don't let it interfere with the free swing of your swagger. It was Lanvin who started the coat with the loose-smock back and straight front, the belt circling inside the back and slipped through slits at each side of the coat to fasten trimly in front—much in the fashion of the present "butcher boy" idea.

Reefer—or Russian.

Two fur silhouettes which have nothing in common but their uncommon chic are the reefer and Russian coats which are creating considerable stir in furrier circles.

College girls will adore the fur reefers and with reason. They're enormously smart when they stop just below the thigh, and they're beautiful, if a bit startling, dyed in the odd shades that are so much a part of the Paris fur picture. Imagine a reefer in bright red shaved lamb, or in carbon blue gairak! If this proves too much of a strain on both imagination and pocketbook there are conservative marro: browns, slatey grays and blond shades which are tremendously effective. The full-length reefers are good, too, in both single and double-breasted styles.

Just to show you how youthful this supple velvety fur can be, the fur people have translated Alaska seal into stunning reefers to charm the collegienne. Gray kidkin, caracul, logwood lapin and the old reliable muskrat take on an expensive look when used in this jaunty connection.

Equally well adapted to seal is the Russian silhouette—that new fitted, belted and flared line that is dramatic without being extreme. Far from being cut in one pattern, these coats show a great variety of collars, including the wide flattering bell-shaped ones which look as though built to save many a chin from frostbite. Others have small convertible turnover collars or ripple reefers. Two-thirds length achieves the snug ideal, and the essential flare below the waist is sometimes maneuvered by ingenious pleats at the side front or back.

The full length coats maintain their Russian character of animated hemlines and fullness pushed to the front. The belt is nearly always narrow—sometimes just a cord with an individual method of fastening. Mole is a well-received fur which has been worked out distinctively in this silhouette.

It is worth bearing in mind, if the Russian inspiration appeals to you, that Paris has been pushing the Cosack hat, a dashing type which is at its best in Persian lamb, the moire-patterned broadtail, and in velvet—a fitting too-off to the Russian costume.

New Fur Coats Feature Swaggers In All Lengths

From the formal luxury of sables to the inexpensive smartness of kidkin, next season's fur coats reflect the all pervading motif of the swagger. This young and casual silhouette, with its boy's smock-like lines or free-swinging drape from the shoulders adapts itself with equal chic to every type of fur from mink to muskrat, and to every occasion, regardless of its grandeur.

The college girl will choose the swagger, but so may her mother. Daughter will probably want hers in kidkin, dyed in the new soft, deep brown shade that Paris is sponsoring, or in baby lamb, pony, the velvet nutria or any of the popular spotted sports furs, such as ocelot or leopard cat. Her parent will doubtless prefer a richer, or more conservative peltry, and will make her selections from broadtail, Persian lamb, caracul, or Alaska seal.

Two thirds and seven-eighths are smart fractions to remember in considering the length of your new fur swagger. Here you have really chic black, however, for all lengths are good, from 33 inches to below your knee, and the main point to remember is to choose a length that is practical, if you have to think of such things. The 33-inch coat, which is scarcely more than a jacket, is a very good type for the woman of average figure, for example, but it ranks as an "extra", rather than a garment that will be suitable for every purpose. Most conservative is the 48-inch swagger. Nearly full length, its lines are universally flattering.

Small tailored collars and simple sleeves are keyed to the youthfulness of the swagger. Registering as a favorite is the little stand-up collar which hugs the neck closely and fastens in some novel fashion, as with cords or clips. Convertible turnover collars that roll back with trim reefers or close warmly about the chin, Johnnie and Peter Pan collars, an occasional sailor or wide tuxedo are top favorites.

Tunnel collars are perfect for the contrasting scarf. We noted one on a shorter swagger of chestnut brown Alaska seal, a gray plaid wool scarf pulled through and knotted dashingly. The scarf matched the skirt of the costume, creating an extremely individual ensemble.

Ripple reeve collars are flattering on the more formal coats, and there is a good bit of contrast used, as luxurious silver fox skins displayed on the flat, shaved and short-haired coats. Pouch and shawl collars are classic, and capelets are rippling on many a coat above the thousand dollar mark.

As with every other fur silhouette, this winter, the swagger makes a point of simple sleeves and deeper armholes. Some sleeves are straight,

It all happened in Kingston. Mother was worried. Daughter did not seem to be making much progress in bringing her boy friend to the proposed point. No one day she said.

Mother—Daughter, has that young man of yours ever mentioned the subject of marriage to you?
Daughter (yawning)—Oh, yes, he did mention it once, but I told him that was so broke he couldn't even afford a new set of tires for the car, let alone a husband for me.

Ye Old Pedestrian
Here lies a pedestrian colder than ice.
He only jumped once when he should have jumped twice.

"If my horse steps on a nail, it doesn't let all the air out of him, and I don't have to get down under him and put on a new leg. So says Princess Blue Feather of Aztec, Indian descent."

The good old days were those in which marriages were made in heaven. Then automobile manufacturers invented the rumble seat.

A mule doesn't coat half as much as an automobile, but is almost as dangerous.

Constable to tourist—You're arrested. Come with me to see the judge.

Tourist—What law have I violated?

Constable—I don't know exactly which one, but I know you can't drive the whole length of Main street in this town without busting at least one of our laws.

You don't hear much of railroad bums any more. The trains run so irregularly the tramps no longer depend upon them. They hit the highway instead.

Ho, hum. It's no longer possible to throw one's rubbish on a vacant lot. They are all occupied by filling stations.

It's "the old boat" to dad and "the bus" to the children, but it's always "the car" to mother.

Over the Telephone—Hello, hello! Is this Hankins, Pakradoni, Williamson and McCloskey?—I want to speak to Mr. Cohen.

Pedestrians get just a little bit more angry when you miss them than they do when they're hit.

Tramp—Could you help a starving man?

Woman—Do you like fish?

Tramp—Yes, ma'am.

Woman—Then come back Friday.

The Almighty said, "By the sweat of your face." The economist says, "put up your plover, don't sow your seed; just drive your car, fish a little when the sun isn't too hot and watch the world go by."

Jakey—George Washington threw a silver dollar across the Potomac River.

Mr. Goldberg—If he had thrown a cent across, Jakey, he would have been a far stronger and wiser man.

Designers of the modern bathing suit seem to be going in pretty strong for the nude deal.

Man—Say, what's the idea—wearing my raincoat?

Roommate—You wouldn't want your new suit to get wet, would you?

An optimist is a person who thinks that the world is only a little bit cockeyed.

Old-fashioned Dad—Don't you ever listen to your conscience?

Daughter (yawning)—No, it never talks in its sleep.

Strongest Living Thing
The strongest living thing, in proportion to its weight, is the beetle. In experiments, scientists found that it can carry a burden 850 times heavier than itself. If man possessed proportionate strength, he could carry a load weighing 70 tons.—Collier's Weekly.

Farm Bureau Program Approved by Directors

At the regular monthly meeting of the Ulster County Farm Bureau directors Tuesday evening, the Fall organization plans were thoroughly discussed and approved. C. C. Du Mond, president of the Farm Bureau, was in charge.

The first important event in the program is a meeting of all community chairmen and directors on September 27. During the last week in September the county dairy and poultry committees will also meet to draft the 1935 programs. In October each of the seventeen organized communities in the county will have a meeting of the local committee. At these meetings the local program will be developed to help farmers in the community and plans for the membership round-up will also be made.

Following the usual custom, a membership renewal letter will be sent to all Farm Bureau members on or about October 25. Of the 710 paid members for 1934, over half came in by mail without solicitation. About November 7 the committee will start the personal canvass.

A new feature of the program this fall will be the combining of the annual business meeting and the membership checkup supper. November 24 has been set as the date for this important event. It is also planned to hold the annual 4-H Club Rally Day at the same time. The organization plans will be completed with the big annual banquet early in December.

At The Theatres

Today

Kingston's Star Theatre About 1920. The story of a young man who overcomes the odds to become a successful actor. The play is a comedy and is a very popular one. It is a very popular one. It is a very popular one.

Orpheum "Thirty Day Princess" and "West of the Divide" A down and out actress, who resembles a princess, subs for her when the princess is taken ill on a good will tour of America, and sets into all kinds of scrapes before the final curtain. Clarence Buddington Kelland wrote the story and Sylvia Sidney and Gary Grant are co-starring in the leading roles. "West of the Divide" is an above average story of the building of the west with John Wayne in the leading part.

Broadway: "Hide-Out." Producers tried to get the same electrifying atmosphere of "The Thin Man" in this picture of a big city racketeer who escapes the law and hides out on a farm. Because of the kindness of the farmer and his wife and because he falls in love with their daughter, he determines to take a new lease on life and go straight. The show has a lot of human appeal, some excellent comedy and its full share of exciting incidents. Robert Montgomery, in the starring role, turns in another enjoyable performance as the suave young racketeer, and others in the cast include Maureen O'Sullivan, Edward Arnold and Elizabeth Patterson. The direction was by W. S. Van Dyke.

Tomorrow Kingston: "Hat, Coat and Glove." With a hat, a coat and a glove as mute evidence to a murder crime, this tricky tale works itself into a high pitch of excitement in which the innocent party is almost convicted of murder as the evidence piled up against him. To make matters more dramatic, the man on trial is the lover of the wife of the man defending him, if such a thing seems within the realm of reason. This lawyer realizes the man is innocent but the idea churns about in his mind as to the advisability of letting him be proven guilty as a punishment for wife stealing. Ricardo Cortez, John Beal, Barbara Robbins, Dorothy Burgess and Margaret Hamilton are in the cast.

Orpheum: "Such Women are Dangerous." Excellent casting plus an enjoyable story both combine to make this picture above average.

Clarence Buddington Kelland wrote the story and Sylvia Sidney and Gary Grant are co-starring in the leading roles. "West of the Divide" is an above average story of the building of the west with John Wayne in the leading part.

Broadway: "Hide-Out." Producers tried to get the same electrifying atmosphere of "The Thin Man" in this picture of a big city racketeer who escapes the law and hides out on a farm. Because of the kindness of the farmer and his wife and because he falls in love with their daughter, he determines to take a new lease on life and go straight. The show has a lot of human appeal, some excellent comedy and its full share of exciting incidents. Robert Montgomery, in the starring role, turns in another enjoyable performance as the suave young racket

WHAT MAKES A GOOD NEWSPAPER?

IS IT SIZE? IS IT CIRCULATION?
IS IT NEWS? IS IT ADVERTISING?
WE THINK IT IS SERVICE

MAYBE you picked up your Daily Freeman today just to find out all about the big ball game. Maybe you are one of those who dive through five or six pages to learn how to bake a deep dish cherry pie. Perhaps you're a seasoned "editorial pager" . . . or one of the thousands who can't wait to find out what "Barbara" is doing . . . or maybe you side-track everything else in favor of the ads—and you'd be surprised how many do!

We don't know what part of the Daily Freeman gets your first choice. But you can feel sure—and if you are an old Freeman reader you'll know without our telling you—that the part of the paper you like best is planned, written and edited with the same care it would get if it were the only part of the paper and you were the only reader we had to please.

The Daily Freeman is vitally concerned in serving you and your desires—and will be as long as you live in Kingston.

ACROSS THE WORLD OR NEXT DOOR...

News items in the Daily Freeman give facts, not opinions. They are meaty but concise. They are written with an eye to human interest. But they are seldom deliberately sensational—if we slip occasionally it is because reporters are human.

People like to read about people and so we write about people. There is an astonishing amount of news in The Freeman about the doings of folks you know. Full wire service brings you the events of all the world—Not a boiled-down rehash, but the whole story, clear and complete.

A visit to our editorial rooms won't show you the smoky, noisy "city desk" of the movies. But it will acquaint you with the headquarters of a smooth-working, efficient news-gathering organization.

THE FREEMAN IS DELIVERED OUT OF TOWN TO VACATIONISTS

Ever gone away for a week or a month? How your eye grabs for a home-town dateline! But Freeman readers need not depend on stray information for news of things back home. The Daily Freeman can put on its traveling clothes, too! Many copies joined readers on their summer outings last week. They didn't have to skip a single episode in the comic strips.

IF YOU'RE GOING ON VACATION

Just call 2200 and leave us your forwarding address. You won't miss a single issue.

YANKS 5—WHITESOX 0

When realities get a bit tiresome or terrifying there's always The Freeman Sports Page to turn to. Did the home-town warriors trim 'em again? What's So-and-So's average? What about this new horse folks are talking about? What is State going to do this fall? When are the Sox coming out of the cellar? The Daily Freeman gives you all the answers with plenty of pictures to make matters clear. The stories are written by real aces who know your sports heroes and their foibles and can write about them entertainingly.

FAMILY FEUD

Sorry, Mr. Brickley! We shall either have to quit printing the comics on the other side of the financial news or you will have to go out and buy another Freeman for Junior. Better take your copy with you when you do because the Mrs. is sitting with eagle-eye, just waiting to grab the paper herself. Comes of being a friend of all the family . . . you sometimes make them enemies!

SOMETHING NEW? OF COURSE...

Mrs. Crummit is showing off her new sports jacket. Or it may be a new-fangled tea cart . . . or a swell picture of Junior at $2.85 the dozen. We don't know for sure because the photographer didn't tell us and the lady has her shoulder in the way. But Mrs. Crummit is doubly pleased. There's not the hint of a bothered budget to trouble her. Something in her expression says she found it in the advertising pages of the Daily Freeman.

Did she save money? Of course! But that's nothing new for a veteran ad-shopper like Mary Crummit. She has saved more than her allowance. Time, shoe-leather and the disposition her husband's forever bragging about. Stole a march on her neighbors, too. (Not all of them — there are quite a few Freeman ad-readers on the Crummit's street!)

HELPING THE ADVERTISERS MAKE NEWS!

You don't have to tell us that So-and-So's Sale of Dresses is news! The ad came in late but it's not going to miss the tiniest part of an edition in spite of the fact that we had to make the layout and pick him out some swell illustrations from our Meyer Both ad service files. The fuss our printers make about that ad would turn the city desk green with envy! Is she plated up and on the press? Right, Bill! Start 'em rolling!

CENTRAL 2200

It's hard to cry about a lost dog when you hear Miss Robinson's cheerful voice at the other end of the wire. But then she can afford to smile. She knows your Daily Freeman Want Ad will find Frisker for you before you're a day older. Want to hire a maid, sell a car, swap a fiddle? Remember the Daily Freeman will do it — and with fewer words.

INDOOR SPORTS, TOO!

Freeman sports aren't all for the fans who haunt the bleachers, ring-side and paddock. Parlor pastimes have their innings, too.

Gehrig and Waner Are Leading Big Leagues

New York, Sept. 8 (AP)—Two outstanding slumps, neither of which affected the pace setters, marked the past week's major league batting performances. The victims were Mel Ott of the New York Giants and Al Simmons of the Chicago White Sox, both of whom had been threatening the leaders' safety.

Ott and Simmons had 11 points each clipped from their averages and each wound up in fifth place in his league, far off the pace. Ott collected four hits in 27 trips to the plate up through yesterday's games; Simmons hit two out of 20.

The pace setters, Paul Waner of Pittsburgh and Lou Gehrig of the Yankees maintained their unaltered pace. Waner lost one point, dropping to .356 with nine hits in 26 attempts but his margin increased as his nearest rival, Bill Terry, suffered a four-point loss. Gehrig hit eight times in 24 trips for a one-point rise to .355 and led Charlie Gehringer by three points. Gehringer, gaining five points through the week with 10 hits in 20 times up, retained second place from Heinie Manush, who improved his mark by two points.

Records of the first ten batters in each major league follow:

Football Moving Up On Sports Parade

SPORTS through Edgren's EYES

By Robert Edgren

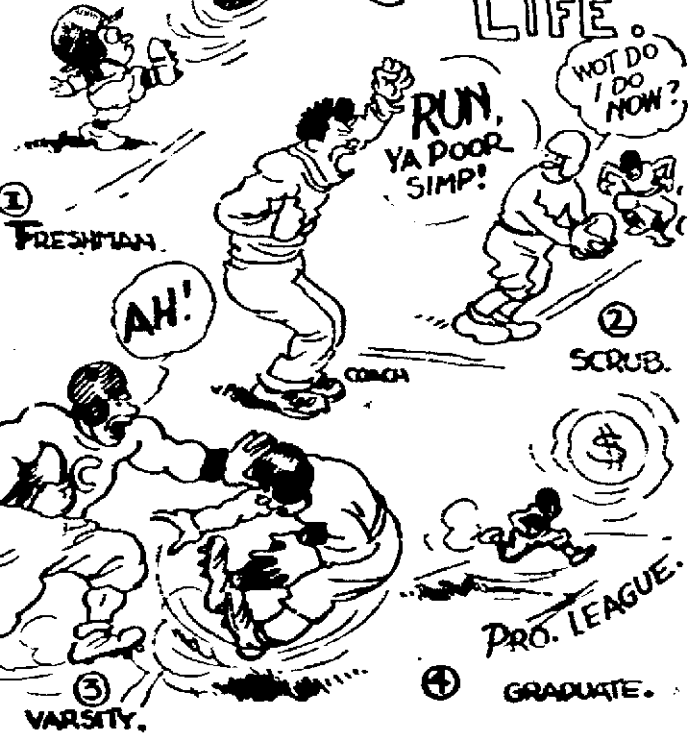

This promises to be one of the greatest football seasons. It is under way already, starting with the high schools, and the colleges are getting in trim to put up a warfare that will cause politics and other disturbing factors to be forgotten. As soon as football begins to stir other sports have to take to the woods. There's no space for a lot of other sport news when the papers begin playing up football.

Princeton in the east expects to add another fine season with the great Tiger team that swept so many gridirons last year. The annual struggle in the middle west will be hotter than ever—and we aren't referring to the weather. On the Pacific Coast there seems to be a chance that Southern California's monopoly may be broken. California's phenomenal freshman team of '33 comes into the picture, and Coach Ingraham has so much speed at his command that he says he is going to change the old order of things entirely, and "every man on the team" will get a chance to carry the ball in a series of new and puzzling formations.

California was very near top form last year, and likely to be half as strong again this season. And there will be plenty of hot competition from Stanford and the other colleges—including U. S. C., which has been keeping unusually quiet and working harder than ever because of the close competition expected. Then the pro footballers are beginning to cut into the college season with teams that will have their own following in many cities.

Of course boxing and other sports will go right along. There is more interest in the heavyweight class than there has been in several years. The situation is reminiscent of the "White Hope" craze, when every big husky in the country had managers sampling on his train and trying to "break" him as a possible future opponent to tear the big title from Jack Johnson's grip. Max Baer, now being banquished in California, makes speeches in which he says Carnera far outclasses all the other heavies and will probably be his opponent next June. Perhaps the wish is father to the deed.

Has Forty-Five Kays. "He's smart in the ring," Vic went

thought. Baer didn't find big Carnera so very hard to beat, although the giant was game and tough enough, and if he has learned to keep his left arm up as protection against Baer's one dangerous punch—the looping overhand right—he might give Baer more trouble next time. But followers of boxing are inclined to think a fast boxer with a good, fast hard punch might worry Baer a lot more. Hamas, for instance, or Art Lasky, who fights Hamas a sort of elimination bout in New York on the 27th of this month. Hamas is a very good boxer, fast, strong, good in defense, and an aggressive, hard hitter. Lasky is no slouch either. He's a big tall fellow with punch and experience. He has had 44 fights, won 32 with knockouts, met both Dempsey and Carnera in exhibitions and made a good showing in each case, and has lost but one fight, and that on a technical kayo. He's smart, quiet, takes good care of himself and has plenty of ambition.

Introducing—Hank Hankinson. But there is another young heavyweight who is attracting a lot of attention just now and has shown up so well in Los Angeles fights that supposedly tough opponents have developed a habit of running out on him. This lad is Hank Hankinson, and when I went through L. A. on a recent trip I found the fight experts talking of nothing else but his ring exploits. Every one I met said: "Have you seen Hankinson—there's the lad who'll trim Baer. He's getting experience fast and by next Spring he'll all have to count him in among the challengers. Tall, fast, and his like a trip-hammer. Baer never showed such a punch. And he's a lot faster than Baer."

Funny thing was that they all said the same thing—and they were all people who follow fights, none of them interested in promotion or managing. Met Vic Forsythe, who followed fighting for many years while on the sports staffs of the N. Y. Journal and the old Evening World. He travels all over the country to see the best fights and seldom misses a title bout. I've usually found his judgment of fighting pretty hot.

"You ought to go to the gymnasium and see this guy work," said Vic. "I haven't seen as promising a youngster since Dempsey's time. He's only 23 years old, 6 feet 4 inches tall and weighs 215 pounds. He came from Ohio. And what a record he's piling up! He's one of these fellows who fights in the Dempsey style—knock him man out or be knocked out in a hurry. No fooling around with him. He's long-legged and light on his feet, has long arms and a fine torso—kind of a Fitzsimmons build only fifty pounds heavier.

Has Forty-Five Kays. "He's smart in the ring," Vic went

Yesterdays Stars

(By The Associated Press.) Jimmy Dykes, White Sox—Batted in three runs, including winning tally, against Yankees. Heinie Manush, Senators, and Buck Newsom, Browns—Manush drove in three runs with three hits in first game; Newsom pitched four hitless innings to gain second victory. Lon Warneke, Cubs—Scattered nine Giant hits to gain 10th victory. Jimmie Fox and Joe Casarella, Athletics—Fox made four hits, including first homer, in double header; Casarella limited Tigers to six hits in second game.

Mayflowers-Crystal Gardens Tomorrow

Tomorrow afternoon at Hushon Park Colonel Jack Clair's Mayflowers will clash with the Crystal Gardens. Clair will toss them over for the Colonel and Tomaski will be on the receiving end. The battery for the gardeners will probably be Dodge and McElraith.

THE Spotlight BY GRANTLAND RICE

Never the twain—said Kipling—"Never the twain shall meet!" But Rudyard, gather at Meadowbrook by the field of dying feet! Where it's "hell for leather" along the turf that waits for the slashing ree! Where rider and horse will fight again the battle of East and West. Hell for leather and blow for blow—where the blood of man runs red. For it's East and West in the saddle now where the far goal awaits about For it's East and West in a scrap again where the twain shall meet one more. Head on, headlong and down the field in the drive for the winning score.

Meadowbrook, L. I., Sept. 8.—As East and West meet at Meadowbrook today it is a renewal of last summer's thunderclap, there will be two veterans worth watching. Their names are Dererous Milburn and Larry Waterbury, members of the Big Four when Meadowbrook and the East ruled polo. They helped bring home and helped defend the cup—when polo was only the name of a game to the West. It is all different now as 35,000 spectators will find at Meadowbrook today when Pedley, Smith, Roark and Boeseke from Texas and California ride out to defend the laurels they won a year ago in Chicago. Milburn and Waterbury will be riding in spirit with the eastern team to help bring back the polo glory that Meadowbrook once knew. Milburn and Waterbury concede nothing, even against the odds. But the unvarnished fact remains that the younger eastern four is up against just about as stout a combination as ever rode to a winning score.

SPEED VS. POWER

This East-West battle at Meadowbrook will carry one of the old elements of sport. This is the meeting of speed and power. The West has the hitting power and just as much riding skill, and the lighter eastern team must gamble on the speed of its ponies, ridden by lighter men in the saddle. Those western ponies will have to carry a block of extra weight, which counts both in quick maneuvering and the longer marches. But for all that, taking into account the fine condition of eastern riders and eastern ponies, the odds ride in the saddles of the West. Phipps, Mills, Guest and Post make up the strongest combination the East can gather under the Meadowbrook banner. You can bank on them to give all they have, and they can all play polo. But they will have a large afternoon holding off Pedley, Smith, Roark and Boeseke, with Rube Williams in reserve, who combines power and skill to an amazing degree. Eric Pedley is a deadly sniper with a goal in sight, and Cecil Smith is one of the all-time stars, up with the leading masters of the past. Roark is a marvel on defense and big Boeseke rounds out a team which should be better than an even bet against any four in the world. (Copyright, 1934, by GRANTLAND RICE.)

Managers Begin To Fret As Welter Title Bout Is Again Rained Out

New York, Sept. 8 (AP)—The 15-round welterweight championship fight between Barney Ross and Jimmy McLarnin still is a "coming attraction" today.

Stalled twice by inopportune rain squalls, Chicago Barney and his Celtic challenger, rapidly losing all patience with an obstinate weather man, hope to wage their return bout in Madison Square Garden Bowl tonight. If they do, it will be the first time in many years any title fight has been held here on a Saturday night.

Should a further postponement be necessary, the match will go over for several days, perhaps until Wednesday or Thursday, to avoid conflict with the Jewish holidays.

While the principals have accepted the two successive postponements philosophically, the same could not be said for their managers. "This is terrible, just terrible," said Pop Foster, McLarnin's pilot. "Jimmy is in fine shape and he was a clinch to win back the title Thursday night. He would have been equal to the task if there had been only one postponement but I don't like two of them. I know he can still win but I wanted him to be at his very best. But that Ross fellow is not benefiting by this either."

Something along the same line came from Art Winch and Sam Pian, who handle Ross's affairs, but the champion himself seemed worried not at all. Additional ticket sales the past two days have virtually assured a crowd of 45,000 or more if the fight is held tonight with receipts close to $194,000.

The betting odds remained steady at 9 to 5 in favor of the champion.

Kaslich A. C. at Downsville Sunday

The Kaslich A. C. nine will meet the Downsville Club tomorrow afternoon on the latter's diamond. Celuch, Wood and Messing will work for the A. C. and Evans and McCarthy will form the Downsville battery.

A large gathering of fans is expected at the Downsville diamond to watch the home town boys clash with their visitors.

Fifth Annual Flower Show of West Park Church opened by President's Mother—Van Benschoten Takes Cup For Second Time.

Mrs. Van Benschoten, mother of the President of the West Park Flower Show, captured the sweepstake cup for the second time. The show, which opened on Tuesday at West Park Church, was a great success. their class. Having raised dahlias since she was 13 years old, Mrs. Van Benschoten has over 1,000 plants. The beauty of its three orange petals, mottled with yellow in the center, is the most beautiful of the class.

Huge dahlias, a foot in diameter or more, grown by Lorae Osterhout of Highland, vied for attention with the stalk of Chrysanthemum dahlias in which the seeds are covered by small yellow petals, shown by Mr. Van Benschoten.

Special award was given the desert garden of cactus grown from seeds from European deserts by Eltinge Hargrave of Kingston. It was loaned through the courtesy of Mrs. DeForest Smith of Kingston. Its strange specimen was a flat star-shaped plant of mottled maroon on white, like a snake's skin.

A huge bank of garden flowers, massed on two tables, was sent from Mrs. Vincent Astor's estate in Rhinebeck.

The blue ribbon for the "bouquet for mother," children's exhibit, was won by the red, white and blue nosegay arranged by Marie Louise Tully, seven-year-old niece of Father Tully of High Falls.

Among the special arrangements that attracted particular attention was the bouquet of Chinese lantern plant and artemisia, the fruit centerpiece of grapes in a glass bowl, the water lily in a shallow black bowl, very attractive arrangement of zinnias, asters, nasturtiums, and mixed bouquets, and a large nosegay.

Although it is late for delphinium, a vase of tall, full-flowered stalks was shown. A stalk of coxcomb with a head that was a bouquet in itself won over several other entries.

A number of potted plants, many of them given by Burgevin's of Kingston, were shown. The collection was more than usually varied and interesting for the beauty and curiouseousness of the plants and their arrangements.

The five leading exhibitors according to the awards of the judges were Van Benschoten-Atkins of West Park, with seven first, three third and one special award; Jerry Polinsky of Napanoch with six first and one second; Mrs. Herman A. Kelley of St. Remy with four first and one second; Mrs. R. R. Gross of Kingston with three first, two second and three third; and Yama Farms with three first, three second and one third. This makes Van Benschoten-Atkins of West Park the winner of the Sweepstakes Cup for the second year in succession. The cup which was presented by Mrs. Silas M. Niles of High Falls must be won three successive years to become the possession of the winner.

A display of various garden flowers covering two large tables from the garden of Mrs. Vincent Astor at Rhinebeck won a first, second and third prize. A special first prize was awarded to David MacFarland and Son of Esopus for permanent planting of decorative evergreens placed especially for the fifth annual show and donated to Ascension Community House. A rock garden designed by King's Nurseries of Kingston attracted much attention and was awarded a special prize.

In the popular vote for the most beautiful basket in any class, Jerry Polinsky of Napanoch won first place with a basket of mixed flowers by David Burgevin won second place, Mrs. R. R. Gross of Kingston, third and Mrs. Myron Terpenning of Highland, fourth.

Fashions by Barbara Bell

A Dress for the Junior Miss

During the season just vanishing, the tailored shirtwaist frock wedged its smart little way into the wardrobe of nearly every style-conscious woman. Having made good in the gallant way of the classics, the vogue for it is an established one for incoming seasons.

The little model shown in the illustration already looks as though it had the advantage of a college education. Pockets are very, very good this year, so four of them—cut like diamonds—brighten up the outlook of this dress. The collar reaches the arrangement. Aside from these details all the hard learned lessons about simplicity being the backbone of this year's mode have been subscribed to.

It is with dresses of this type that you are to wear interesting scarf accessories. One that is both smart and new is a large silk handkerchief (colorful, of course) rolled and worn like a lei well away from the neck. Smaller triangles may be arranged to the beneath the collar at the back, with only the cowed front in evidence. Belts usually are of suede or patent leather with fanciful abstract designs decorating them at the closing. Buttons are terribly interesting this year. They come in the form of nuts, dogs' heads, horses, and large discs. The most popular colors for these novelties are black and mahogany. Metallic buttons are in more conventional shapes, as yet not entering the animal kingdom in pursuit of ideas for expression.

As to materials—besides the usual classic wools there are novel fall cottons, and velveteens that are checked and plaided in all the authentic Scotch designs. These are used for dresses of this type with surprisingly smart results. In colors, green, brown, henna, red, bright blue and black are important.
